Overview

This bill makes changes to the terms and nominations of members of the Metropolitan Council. Members would serve four year staggered terms. The nominating committee would also be restructured so that the governor, the Association of Metropolitan Municipalities, and the Association of Minnesota Counties would all appoint five members to the committee. If the governor decided to appoint an individual who was not a finalist recommended by the nominating committee, the governor must provide a written explanation for rejecting the finalists. The bill also clarifies the requisite knowledge and time commitments required of council members.

Section Description

The governor must create a nominating committee to nominate people to the council. The governor, the Association of Metropolitan Municipalities, and the Association of Minnesota Counties each appoint five members to the committee. The committee must seek out qualified individuals to apply for a council member position and seek input from local governments and local government organizations.

The committee submits three finalists to the governor, and provides notice about the finalists in the same manner as the notice of vacancy. The governor may appoint one of the finalists to the council member position after at least two weeks and a public comment period. The governor must consult with the nominating committee if the governor intends to appoint an individual who is not a finalist. The appointment of an individual who was not a finalist requires a written explanation by the governor detailing the reason for rejecting finalists.

The bill clarifies that council members must have relevant experience in local government, transportation, housing, environment, and regional development, and must be able to make the necessary time commitments required of a council member.

Effective for appointments made on or after January 1, 2022.
