To whom it may concern

I have been following the new MRRRA policy honestly mostly because I have a loved one who is incarcerated. I have seen programs, classes etc really help individuals who are incarcerated to become better humans. I believe if put into place for all incarcerated individuals as an incentive and with added programming available we could make a huge difference in recidivism. Not just non violent crimes deserve a second chance and correction as is meant to be for them a correction facility. Non violent criminals who already get the chance at early release with boot camp typically for a drug charge doesn't seem to be the only deserving person. Many violent cases as they are called are a first offense at a young age when possibly not old enough to make a wiser decision or mature enough to know consequences to things they didn't understand themselves. I ask that you consider approving and pushing for options for these men and offer programs that help all of us get our loved ones home and contributing to a much better life for all.
