

I am writing in opposition of reporting yearly testing to the district superintendents office.

Generalized test results reveal limited knowledge of a well rounded education depending on the students environment including urban or rural or life circumstances endured being raised at the time of the given test. Each child will score uniquely different depending what was taught or learned depending on the grade level in which the student is tested in.

I don't diminish my child by even sharing the testing scores. We celebrate the accomplishments while I see an area we may need improvement in.

Serious responsibility to raise up a child in the best way they should go depending on their learning style is already taken into consideration as parents we want them to succeed in every area of their life. A limited view of the big picture of a child's development over a test score with the extra paperwork for parents and school districts infringes more unnecessary demands and stress to an already difficult life.

Thank you for taking the time to hear my voice.
Sincerely, Shenda Skalski
