WHO WE ARE

The Urban Indigenous Legacy Initiative is a collective of 16 renowned Native American nonprofit organizations in the Twin Cities – focused on issues ranging from healthcare to housing, workforce development to childcare – that have provided our communities with powerful and effective services for more than four decades.

We serve low-wealth Minnesotans, most in Minneapolis and St. Paul, but also throughout the state, from Steele County in the south to Aitkin County in the north. Each year, we touch thousands of lives with critical support.

LEGACY ORGANIZATIONS PROVIDE:

Education
Workforce development
Behavioral health services
Homeless/housing services
Arts/after school enrichment
Indian child welfare and much more for communities

THE PROBLEM AND THE SOLUTION

The COVID-19 pandemic and civil unrest of the past three years have highlighted disparities that continue to burden the urban Indigenous community. Amid high levels of need, we are grappling with aging, capacity-limiting facilities.

We've come together to seek $136.4 million in state funding to construct 14 new, culturally affirming buildings that will strengthen our communities by expanding services, as well as create hundreds of new jobs through that capacity growth. Here's a sampling of the transformational impact:

- Double-digit increases in mental health services
- Foodshelf support for 2000 more neighbors
- Doubling of workforce development clients
- New opioid treatment center for 400
- Twice as many youth served at emergency shelter
- Tripling of farm production efforts

It's no accident that the term "legacy" is part of this collaboration. We are recommitting to planting roots in the land of our land of our ancestors, moving forward to transform our community for generations to come.
