To whom it concerns

I am writing because I am concerned with the proposed language in the Omnibus Bill in the House Education Policy which adds the requirement of "proof of prior testing plan" and a "copy of the official test scores" for homeschooled students. There is no evidence that this change is necessary or useful. This would add an unnecessary burden not only to homeschool families, but also to districts as they would need to maintain the additional paperwork. This would prove to be only a waste of paper and many people's time and energy.

Thank you for your consideration on this matter.
