

Hi Nancy,

Because opinions and situations on various issues, i.e., public transportation, housing, farm policy, etc. vary greatly between urban, suburban, and rural communities, each of these communities deserve to have their voice heard. Should these various types of communities be combined into one district, the legislature will be unable to determine which voice it is hearing. Additionally, whichever community has the greatest interest in any given topic will overwhelm the viewpoint of the others and create a "tyrannical majority" in the district. Both of these are extremely undesirable and anathema to truly representative government. So keep the various communities segregated from each other so that various opinions from various people can be clearly heard and acted upon.

Thank you for considering my opinion.

Byron Fedie, District 03
