

Chapter 69

2026 Regular Session

Subject Requiring notice and disclosure when officers deploy chemical irritants within a building

Bill HF 3782

Date June 2, 2026

Overview

Peace officers may use chemical irritants such as tear gas and pepper spray in an attempt to force a person to leave a room or building. Officers may also use smoke screens and diversionary devices (such as “flash bang” devices) when entering a building or room. Those products may leave residue that requires specialized cleaning or treatment.

This act requires peace officers to provide notice to building owners and, if the building is a home or apartment, the occupant when the officer uses a chemical irritant in the building. It also requires law enforcement agencies and local units of government to share specific information about the products used when asked by the building owner, a tenant in the building, an insurance company, or someone hired to clean or treat the building or room. Finally, the act requires the Department of Public Safety to develop a standard notification form for officers to provide to building owners and occupants.

Summary

Section	Description
---------	-------------

1	Use of chemical irritants; disclosure required.
---	--

Subd. 1. Definition. Defines “building” as used in this section.

Subd. 2. Notice of use; identification of products deployed. Authorizes peace officers, law enforcement agencies, and local government units to provide certain information about chemical irritants, smoke screens, and diversionary devices used within a building. Requires that an officer from the agency that deploys an irritant (or an officer from the lead agency if more than one agency is involved) provide a notice when chemical irritants are deployed within a building. Specifies that notice should be given to the building owner and, if the building is a home or apartment, to the occupant. Specifies that notice may be in the form of a standard notice form created by the Department of Public Safety. Also requires law enforcement agencies and local government units to provide specific information about chemical irritants, smoke screens, and diversionary devices used within a building when the building owner, a tenant, an insurance company, or a person hired to perform cleanup services asks for that information, and requires the lead agency to identify any other agencies that deployed any of those items.

Subd. 3. Standard form. Directs the Department of Public Safety to establish a standard notification form for peace officers to use when informing a building owner or occupant that chemical irritants were deployed within the building. Requires that the notice inform the person that irritants were deployed, that they may need specialized cleanup or treatment, and that the owner or occupant can contact the law enforcement agency or local government unit for more information. Requires the department to provide notification forms to law enforcement agencies at no cost.
