Overview

In 2013, the legislature proposed a constitutional amendment that will be on the ballot at the 2016 general election (Laws 2013, chapter 124). That constitutional amendment would create a citizens council to set salaries for legislators. This bill:

- Amends the proposed constitutional amendment by stating that none of the members of the citizens council may be the spouse of a current legislator or a current legislative employee (The language proposed in 2013 forbids current or former legislators or lobbyist from serving on the council)
- Changes the ballot question to refer to “state” legislators
- Adds a title for the constitutional ballot question: “Remove Legislators’ Power to Set Their Own Pay”
- Contains statutory language creating the Legislative Salary Council contained in the proposed constitutional amendment
