Overview

This bill prohibits peace officers from using certain restraints that involve putting pressure on a person's neck and requires law enforcement agencies to update their use of force policies to include the new restrictions.

Summary

Section	Description
1	When authorized. Makes a conforming change.
2	Limitations on the use of certain restraints. Prohibits peace officers from using certain forms of restraint that involve pressure on a person's neck, securing all of a person's limbs together behind the person's back ("hog tying"), and securing a person in any way that results in transporting the person face down in a vehicle. Prohibits peace officers from using any other restraints that restrict the free movement of a person's neck or head unless necessary to protect the person, a peace officer, or another from imminent harm.
3	Prohibition on use of certain restraints. Requires law enforcement agencies to update their policies on use of force to prohibit certain forms of restraint that involve pressure on a person's neck; securing all of a person's limbs together behind the person's back ("hog tying"); securing a person in any way that results in transporting the person face down in a vehicle; or using any other restraints that restrict the free movement of a person's neck or head unless necessary to protect the person, a peace officer, or another from imminent harm.
