Overview

The federal Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) of 1978 establishes child protection procedures and requirements for children who are members of or eligible for membership in a federally recognized Tribe. In 1985, Minnesota enacted the Minnesota Indian Family Preservation Act (MIFPA), Minnesota Statutes sections 260.751 to 260.835, to expand upon ICWA requirements. Elements of ICWA and MIFPA requirements include:

- inquiry into a child's lineage to an Indian tribe
- agency and court notice to a child's parents, custodian, and Tribe and the Bureau of Indian Affairs
- criteria for removal of an Indian child
- qualified expert witness testimony regarding risk of serious emotional or physical damage to a child
- active efforts to provide remedial and rehabilitative services, to prevent out-of-home placement
- specific out-of-home placement and permanency preferences for Indian children

In November 2022, the United States Supreme Court heard oral arguments on Haaland v. Brackeen, a case challenging the constitutionality of ICWA on multiple grounds. A decision on the case is expected in spring 2023.

This bill makes technical changes and adds numerous provisions to MIFPA, incorporating federal ICWA procedures and requirements for voluntary and involuntary child placement and permanency proceedings. The bill also removes the expiration for the American Indian Child Welfare Advisory Council.
