Overview

The National School Lunch Program provides meal assistance to students in Minnesota's public and private schools. The meal programs are administered by the Minnesota Department of Education (MDE) under the rules established by the United States Department of Agriculture. The federal government annually sets and provides funding levels for each meal served based on the student's family income. Nationally, students qualify for free meals if their family income is less than 130 percent of the federal poverty guidelines and for reduced price meals if family income is between 130 percent and 185 percent of the FPG. Minnesota also provides state aid for a portion of each school's nutrition programs and for school lunch, including providing the 40 cent per lunch difference so that under current law, all school lunches served to free or reduced-price meal eligible students are free to the qualifying Minnesota student.

The Community Eligibility Provision (CEP) program allows a school to serve free meals to all of its students. For school sites with at least 62.5 percent free and reduced-price meal programs, the federal funds cover the full costs of providing the meals. Other sites with more than 40 percent free and reduced-price meal eligible students may also join the program, but the federal reimbursement (roughly 60 percent more) is generally not sufficient to fully fund the cost of the meals even though schools participating in CEP reduce costs by eliminating the need to track student meal status and by forgoing the school's need to undertake any collection activities for unpaid meal debts.

This bill uses state funds, after the application of all available federal funds, to provide free school breakfast and free school lunch to all Minnesota students, regardless of their family income.
