First engrossment

Subject Government Data Practices: Public data requests

Authors Greene and others

Summary

Government entities may respond to larger or more complex public data requests on a rolling basis over a period of time, rather than all at once. This bill provides that a government entity may suspend an ongoing response to a public data request if, within five days, the requesting person does not appear to inspect requested data or collect copies of requested data that the government entity has already prepared for that person.
